

HEAT RECOVERY

The use of a rotary heat exchanger in the fresh-air and exhaust-air unit reduces the operating costs for the pre-heating of outside air and the capital investment costs for the projected boiler capacity.

Efficiency levels up to 85%, the variable speed of the rotor, and operational monitoring ensure maximum heat recovery.